

WHAT SHOULD I CITE?

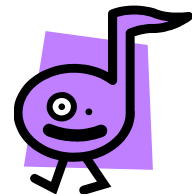

- All direct quotations

- All paraphrases of content that are not common knowledge
- All summaries of content that are not common knowledge
 - All images and videos that are not your own creation

- All music and audio recordings that are not your own creation

- All interviews and correspondences

How Do I Know What Is Common Knowledge?

Start your research by making a list of everything you already know about your topic. That is your common knowledge. Anything new that you learn should be cited.